TYNG WINS THE GOVERNOR'S CUP AT BALTUSROL.

BAYARD DEFEATED IN THE FINAL ROUND BY TWO UP AND ONE TO PLAY-CONSOLA-TION PRIZE FOR GRAHAM.

other day of fast play "up Baltusrol way," as the farmers about the little village of Short Hills term the golf links, brought the open tournament of the Baltusrol Golf Club to an end. The delightful weather added its share of success to the final matches, and the links, which had become worn to perfect smoothness by the constant trampling, sided the men to do their best. For the Governor's Cup, the chief trophy of the week, Bayard and Tyng, clubmates and old golfing rivals, were the competitors, and the match was admirably aught and royally won. Thirty-six holes was the distance covered, and in the end Tyng, who had been 1 up at the close of the morning half, was the victor by 2 up and 1 to play.

No one begrudged these two their positions in the finals for throughout the tournament they had shown their superiority in countless ways, and of the honors. Though neither equalled his score of 38 established on the first nine holes of the previous day, both came within a stroke of doing so, and it was not until the last few holes that Tyng evinced any decided superiority. In fact, for a contest of such length, the struggle was the

Both started rather poorly, and the first hole was halved in a mediocre 6, followed by another half on the second, this time in 4. Then Tyng got down a 12-foot put on the third green, which he reached in 2, and won the hole at 3 to 4. Bayard had a chance to take the fourth, as Tyng sclaffed his iron and only reached the edge of the green on his approach, but his eye was poor, and he missed the all-important put, finally losing at 4 to 5. Bayard got the next hele, however, but lost the gixth, again on poor putting. The seventh was halved in a good 4, and as Bayard got the next two the players turned for home all even, both Facing the tenth, Bayard seemed to open up his shoulders and let a little more speed into his strokes, but Tyng, who knows nothing about a full ewing and confines himself to a three-quarters cantage. The tenth was halved in 4, both being on the green with their mashies. Playing for the he the green which measures 283 yards. Bayard took a troke more to reach the green, and Tyng won at The thirteenth also went to Tyng, who was now 2 up, and apparently had plenty of reserve power for the remaining holes of the round. But, as so frequently happens when he is ahead, Tyng fell off a bit on the next two holes, and Bayard got them both, thus tying the score. The fifteenth was halved in 7, and the 500-yard sixteenth was won by Tyng in an admirable 5. Bayard got the next on a combination of good brassey and approach plays, but, as Tyng closed the round with the eighteenth, which he took at 4 to 5, the morning play ended with Tyng 1 up.

After a brief rest, the two began the afternoon ound, and Bayard, who meanwhile had been counselled to "go at him hard on the opening holes," round, and Bayard, who meanwhile had been counpelled to "go at him hard on the opening holes," siruggled manfully to close the gap. After halving the first hole in 6, this overanxiety led him to miscalculate his approach, and the second hole went to Tyng in 4. A perfect drive, approach and put gave Bayard the third in 3, but if he had any hope of catching up with his lithe and dashing clubmate, it was lost when Tyng went down in 4 on the next green. From that time until the ninth hole was reached, however, Bayard held his own in good form, and every hole was halved. Tyng was then 2 up. The latter added another hole to this score by winning the tenth in 3, and followed it with the eleventh in 4.

That was the beginning of the end for Bayard.
The twelfth was halved, and though Bayard got the next two his spurt was only momentary, and Tyng virtually settled matters by taking the fifteenth, making him dormie three. In going for the sixteenth Tyng topped his second, an iron, and landed just short of the bunker. In such a position it was hazardous for him to attempt a brassey, but with characteristic boldness Tyng drew the club from his hag and attempted to clear the obstruction. The ball banged against the cap, Bounced off and hit a tree and finally landed in its original position. Again the brassey was used, and this time the ball went over, but the misfortune cost him the hole and left Bayard only 2 down. Both were on the next green in 2, and the hole was linally halved in 4, giving Tyng the match by 2 up and 1 to play. The cards were:

COLUMBIA'S GYMNASTIC EXHIBITION.

It seemed a kind of tribute to Dr. Watson L. Savago and Francis S. Bangs that Columbia's commencement exercises should begin with an athletic exhibition. To these two men the students are most thankful for bringing about the change. The gymnastic exhibition at Columbia yesterday afternoon was a success. The large gymnasium was crowded with more than a thousand women and half as many men. Ginspy, the fencing master, fenced with Mitchell, and Bojus had a bout with single sticks with Nadd.

The aquatic exhibition received the most appliause, probably because the sight of water helped to make the spectators forget the heat.

TRACK ATHLETICS.

CHICAGO TEAM WINS MOST POINTS AT THE WESTERN INTERCOLLEGI-

ATE MEET. Chicago, June 3.-The annual field games of the Western Intercollegiate Association took place to day on Ravenswood Field. The University of Chi-cago team won a rather easy victory, a total of third, with 27. The Wisconsin men failed to live up to the expectations of their admirers, scoring only 14 points.

The prominent feature of the day's programme was the work of Powers, of Notre Dame, in the field events. Twenty-one of the thirty-three points credited to his college were due to his work. He secured first in the shotput, the discus throw, divided first honors in the high jump and pole vault and secured second place in the broad jump. Three Western intercollegiate records were broken during the afternoon. Two of these Powers placed to his credit, in the shotput and in the high jump, Louis, of Iowa College, dividing honors with him in that event. In the broad jump, in which Powers secured second place, he was only beaten out by the slender margin of a half-inch.

A fight, which for an instant threatened to develop into a battle royal between a hundred or more angry college men, took place at the finish of the half-mile run, immediately after the start cries of "Foul!" were raised against the Michigan men, who, it was said, were deliberately pocketing Moloney, the Chicago contesiant. The cries increased to an uproar as the men came into the stretch, but Moloney managed to get through, and won out by a desperate spurt. As the Michigan men left the track and started to their quarters one excited spectator struck at Barret, and in a second the bicycle track incline and part of the field at its edge were a mass of shouting, fighting men. Policemen jumped into the crowd, however, and hustled the original offender out of the grounds. The heat was intense, and many of the men, especially in the long runs, were much exhausted at the finish. McLean, of Michigan, who won out in the final of the 120-yard hurdles, fell in a dead faint after crossing the line, and did not regain consciousness for fully fifteen minutes. The summary follows:

RICE TOO MUCH FOR THE CHAMPIONS. The Brooklyn club, champion of the New-York Cricket Association, fully expected to gain its first victory over the Kearny Cricket Club at Prospect Park yesterday. With only six runs necessary to win, and three wickets to fall, it seemed a sure thing for them, but against the effective bowling of A. Rice they were unequal to the occasion, and after an exciting finish Kearny won by the narrow margin of three runs. In addition to taking six wickets for eixteen runs. Rice secured top score of the game with 22. J. Pedlow's 21 was the only double-figure score for Brooklyn. The score; KEARNY C. C.
